JAPANESE IN NIKOLAIEVSK MASSACRED BY RUSSIANS

Several Hundred Killed, Declares Tokio War Office Report

SITUATION GRAVE

Troops And Warships Are Sent; Communications Are Shut Off

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, April 24.—The Foreign Office has issued the following statement:

"Conditions in the Nikolaievsk district which have been assuming increasing gravity since the beginning of March appear to have culminated in a serious upheaval. The suspension of communications renders it absolutely impossible to ascertain the real state of affairs but all reports so far received point to the conclusion that the Japanese guards in the locality suffered annihilation, and that several hundreds of Japanese residents, including the Consul, were massacred.

"In view of the seriousness of the entire situation, efforts have been made by the Japanese Consular and military authorities in Siberia to ascertain the facts through the medium of negotiations with the Russian authorities, and at the same time to take the necessary steps to rescue the sufferers. The endeavor has however been practically frustrated by the complete absence of communication with the disturbed district. In addition to the obstacle to traffic presented by the frigid climatic conditions, which still continue.

LAND AT ALEXANDROVSKY BUT MEET NO RESISTANCE

"The hopelessly chaotic condition into which neighboring localities have been thrown makes it quite clear that the attainment of the object after which the Japanese have hitherto been striving will be an impossibility unless more drastic steps than the usual means are taken.

"The Japanese Government has therefore decided to despatch a contingent to Nikolaievsk for the purpose of protecting the Japanese residents. As however, it is impossible to reach the district direct because of the ice it was decided that the contingent should be sent via Sakhalin, landing at Alexandrovsky where it should remain until the frigid season is over, in the meanwhile protecting local Japanese residents.

"In accordance with this decision the contingent departed for Sakhalin on April 19, under escort of the warships Mikasa and Mishima, arriving at Alexandrovsky early in the morning of April 22. The troops were able to land without encountering any resistance. The Japanese residents in the district were found to be safe. The majority of them were taken on board the Mikasa."

(3). The protection of railroads and Government property and buildings shall be placed in charge of armed guards, drafted from the Russian Army.

RAILWAY PROTECTION UNDER ALLIED BOARD

(4). A civil guard shall be stationed along the railway lines in order to facilitate the repatriation of the Czechs. The protection of the railways shall be subject to regulations specified by the Allied Railway Commission.

Chekiang Tuchun Told To Control His Military Forces Better

"Exercise better control of your soldiers and police" is the reply sent by Dr. Sun Yat-sen to General Lu Yung-hsiang, Tuchun of Chekiang, who advocates the abolition of the Tuchun system in China. After expressing his approval of the attempt of the Chekiang Tuchun to rid the country of militarism, the former President scores him for doing things "diametrically opposed" to what he has said in his circular telegram.

Dr. Sun's message said in part:

"The students who are now sacrificing their studies and devoting their time to work for the salvation of the country are patriotic. They are empty handed and defenseless. Who would have thought that the soldiers and police of Shanghai and Hangchow would proclaim martial law as if expecting the onslaught of a great enemy? They committed outrages and beat the students.

"If these soldiers and police were in other provinces, there would be no cause for surprise, but all were under your control. Certainly I am grieved to say that the behavior of your soldiers and police is diametrically opposed to the many things you have said in your telegram."

CAILLAUX GUILTY OF ONE CHARGE BUT NOT TREASON

Convicted Of Communicating With Enemy—Loses Political Rights For 10 Years

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, April 22.—The High Court today by 213 votes to 28 rejected the charges of high treason against M. Caillaux, but found him guilty of correspondence with the enemy by 150 votes to 91. M. Caillaux was sentenced to three years imprisonment but will only serve one month as a certain allowance will be made for the time he has been under arrest. He will also pay to the Court the costs of the trial which are estimated at 50,000 francs.

Paris, April 23.—It appears that the sentence of three years' imprisonment on M. Caillaux is reducible by one quarter and as he has already been in prison for 27 months and 10 days, he ought to have been released ten days ago. M. Caillaux was also sentenced to five year's restricted freedom, under which sentence the authorities are ordering the place of his residence, and to ten years' deprivation of political rights.

One hundred and fifty guests will be invited to the banquet at the Bureau. Mr. N. T. Yang, secretary of the Commissioner of Foreign Affairs, will be in charge of the program.

SHOOTING AFFRAY IN APOLLO LOBBY; NO ONE IS HURT

Shanghai Attorney Uses Gun After Being Knocked Down By Harbin Man

At 9:20 o'clock last night, shortly after the performance had started, the audience at the Apollo Theater was startled by two shots fired by Mr. Emmanuel B. Sousitchner of 3 Young Allen Terrace at Mr. F. Schichman, Harbin resident, while the latter was in the lobby of the playhouse. No one was injured although several persons were waiting to purchase tickets from the box office at the time.

According to eye witnesses, Sousitchner fired after he had been struck in the face by Schichman. The affair will be aired in the Russian Consular Court this morning.

Persons who saw the trouble said that Schichman had accused Sousitchner of slandering his wife, Mrs. Schichman has been in Shanghai several months and lives at W38 Carter Road. Her husband, they said, came from Harbin to get an explanation of statements alleged to have been written by Sousitchner concerning Mrs. Schichman. The latter was with her husband at the theater when the shooting occurred.

Constable Knight of the Hongkew Station and an Indian policeman on duty at the corner of North Szechuen Road and Haining Road heard the shooting and while the Sikh took the revolver, a five-chambered weapon, Knight arrested Sousitchner. Sergeant Schmidt of the Hongkew Station, who was in the theater watching the performance, assisted in making the arrest.

Sousitchner was taken to the Hongkew Station and held until shortly before 11 o'clock when he was released upon the request of the Russian Consulate-General. He is a well-known Russian attorney.

No Economic Pressure On Germans Planned Says Lloyd George

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, April 22.—According to the Paris edition of the Daily Mail, it is understood that the French counter-proposals at the San Remo conference with regard to the enforcement of the terms of the peace treaty, consist in the revival of the proposal for the occupation of the Ruhr valley by a French or Allied contingent.

The Ruhr coal supplies would then be in the hands of France who would take the coal to which she is entitled and would hand over the rest to Germany.

The French call attention to paragraph 18, annexe 2, of the Treaty of Versailles which permits such a measure in the case of voluntary default by Germany. They state that they are desirous of working in the most loyal cooperation with the Allies and invite them to join with France in this.

ENOUGH STARVATION IN GERMANY NOW

San Remo, April 23.—In the course of a conversation with journalists today, Mr. Lloyd George denied that economic pressure against Germany was proposed. He declared that if a breach of the Treaty was committed means of enforcing the Treaty must be used but the extent of such measures would depend of the nature of the breach. He disliked economic pressure involving the stoppage of food as there was enough starvation in Germany already. Anyhow the Treaty must be enforced.

Mr. Lloyd George said that he did not believe that any one of the Allies would act alone. The Allies must stand together because the time might come when Germany would again be formidable but the idea that Germany was a serious menace to the Allies at present was fantastic. Reports received from British officers in all parts of Germany indicated that Germany was paralysed. The Premier said that he anticipated at present was the refusal of a satisfactory settlement of the Ruhr question. The one difficulty at present was the refusal of Bavaria to obey orders from Berlin but the occupation of the Ruhr valley and of part of Russia was not the best method of bringing pressure to bear on Bavaria.

FEAR OF BOLSHEVISM IS NOT EXAGGERATED

The Premier declared that in his opinion the fear of Bolshevism in Germany was not exaggerated but that the German character would not readily adopt Bolshevism. On the other hand the ludicrous failure of the Kapp incident showed that Germany was indisposed to accept a military movement.

With regard to the last German note, Mr. Lloyd George said that the real question was whether 100,000 men were sufficient to maintain order. If they were, then the German request was unreasonable but, if not, then different considerations must apply. Marshal Foch once recommended that the German Army should be 200,000 when he believed that America was joining in the guarantee to France but the situation had changed owing to the attitude of America. All the military advisers at that time recommended an army of 200,000.

Marshal Foch however proposed a conscript army of that size but the proposal was rejected on the ground that it would give Germany 2,000,000 trained men every ten years which was too dangerous. Accordingly a long service voluntary army was substituted and Marshal Foch reduced the number to 100,000. The Premier strongly denied that he had ever proposed a revision of the Treaty.

CONFERENCE SEEKING AMERICAN VIEWPOINT

With regard to the presence of the American Ambassador at San Remo, Mr. Lloyd George said that there was no very great advantage in the attendance of a representative who only took notes. The Conference needed someone able to explain the American point of view to which it greatly deferred. It was anxious to have the American view because it was detached from European prejudices and its absence was therefore greatly regretted.

Paris, April 23.—The San Remo correspondent of the Petit Journal learns that Marshal Foch does not consider the Allied troops sufficient to enforce the treaty and recommends their increase by 200,000.

London, April 23.—Messrs. Clynes, Arthur Henderson, C. W. Bowerman, and W. H. Thomas, on behalf of the national committees of the Labor Party, have telegraphed resolutions to Mr. Lloyd George at San Remo, urging the Government to accept the mandate to administer Palestine with a view to the reconstitution of the country as a national home for the Jews.

SUGGESTS AMERICAN NATIONS FORM LEAGUE

Montevideo, April 23.—The President, Senor Brum, addressing students of the University, proposed the formation of an American League on a basis of equality of all American nations for mutual defense and the settlement of all disputes amongst American nations. The President declared that all other American countries should make a declaration similar to the Monroe doctrine which would put them on the same footing as the United States for joint action against foreign aggression. He proposed that the League should be formed without prejudice to the League of Nations.

Peking, April 26.—The Chinese newspapers state that the Austrian Treaty will shortly be submitted to Parliament as China is ready to resume commercial relations with Austria.

Berlin, April 22.—The President of the German Peace delegation in Paris has presented a note to the Entente, pointing out that, as a result of the withdrawals carried out by April 21, the number of troops in the neutral zone no longer exceeds the force allowed by the Peace Treaty and only the number of military formations is now in excess. The note states that any further reduction of the number of formations is not feasible as the execution of police measures in thickly-populated districts can best be carried out by small military groups.

BELIEVE FRANCE IS READY TO ACT ALONE

London, April 22.—The Times writes in a leading article: "The stability of the entire treaty, the existence of the League of Nations, Anglo-French friendship cemented by torrents of blood, all hinge on the question of the hour, whether Germany is to be compelled to observe the treaty." The journal declares that there is "barely time to avert the catastrophe to which Mr. Lloyd George and Signor Nitti seem to be drifting."

British correspondents at San Remo state that France considers Mr. Lloyd George's plan of economic pressure totally inadequate and they believe that France is ready to act alone in order to secure the enforcement of the treaty.

French correspondents assert that Mr. Lloyd George and Signor Nitti sought to invite the German Government to take part in the San Remo conference in the person of the Chancellor. The correspondents declare that Mr. Lloyd George deferred to M. Millerand's opposition to such a proposal, but that he has been endeavoring since "with his usual fertility or invention" to achieve the same end by other means.

SECRET GERMAN ARMY OF HALF MILLION MEN

The Times Frankfurt correspondent telegraphs that Germany has at present an effective army of at least half a million men, organised secretly by the military party against which the German Government are helpless.

San Remo, April 22.—M. Millerand in an interview today said that with regard to the question of the enforcement of the Treaty, there was no real divergence between the British and the French and he did not doubt that agreement would be reached on other points. France insisted on the disarmament of Germany. Minor natural difficulties on the coal question had been exaggerated. There might also be difficulties with Germany with regard to financial obligations but when Germany had proved her good faith France would meet her in a reasonable spirit. M. Millerand said that the report of the Air Commision evidence that Germany was determined to attempt to evade the Treaty and he also regarded Germany's request for an increased army as another attempt to evade her obligations.

KURDISTAN REMAINS UNDER TURK RULE

San Remo, April 22.—The terms of the Turkish treaty are practically settled, Kurdistan will remain under Turkish sovereignty for the present. Its final settlement will be reconsidered within two years by the League of Nations. The armed force necessary to enforce the Turkish treaty has been settled. There are already 200,000 troops in the areas involved and the Supreme Council is satisfied that this is adequate.

San Remo, April 21.—The conference has decided on the formation of a new financial commission to manage the financial affairs of Turkey, abolishing the existing commissions.

Constantinople, April 22.—The Allied High Commissioners have communicated to the Porte an invitation to send its delegates to Paris on May 10 to receive the Peace Treaty.

Paris, April 21.—General Masterman, head of the Allied Commission of Air Control, reporting to the Ambassadors Conference, urged the necessity for immediate Allied action to make Germany execute the clauses of the treaty dealing with the suppression of military aircraft.

GERMAN OFFICERS HOSTILE TO ALLIES

According to the Petit Parisien, General Masterman reported that the Germans were deliberately opposing the attempts to check war material, rendering the Mission's journeys most difficult. German officers, General Masterman is stated to have reported, behaved everywhere in a hostile manner. Aviation material which had been stolen from war material depots was discovered in the neighborhood of Berlin, while fresh construction was being carried out secretly.

Paris, April 22.—According to the correspondent of the Petit Journal at San Remo, Japan as well as Italy is supporting Mr. Lloyd George in insisting that Germany's indebtedness should be fixed now.

Cairo, April 21.—A telegram received here from Jerusalem states that Major-General Sir Louis Bols, Chief Administrator of Palestine, addressing the Moslem, Christian and Jewish leaders, said that there was only one authority which was his.

He added that they were free to express their opinions which would be seriously considered but, if they were violent in future, he would make unrestricted use of his large military forces to repress disorder.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

Playful habits of Wong Ahsan, a car washer who sometimes works, when he feels favorably disposed towards labor, at the Horse Bazaar, cost him $100 or one month in jail yesterday when he appeared in the Mixed Court.

Wong was feeling sportive Sunday morning and whistled and sang and in various ways showed his pleasure at being allowed to groom the motor car belonging to Mr. J. G. Lock, of the Wing On Company.

Finally the job was finished.

"What next?" Wong asked himself.

"Ah, I have it," he answered his own query, "a joyride!"

He started the car and everything was lovely until he tried to stop it. But that was quite a different matter. And a serious one, too, with an electric light pole looming in the offing.

Pushing and pulling at levers, turning switches and screaming language that wouldn't look well in print, the car washer sought to avert disaster.

He didn't succeed. The pole was wrecked. The car doesn't look as though it were just from the factory. And Wong has a new regard for the foreigners' law.

"I just wanted to play," he explained to the court. "I didn't have anything else to do."

"That being the case," the court inquired, "where is your chauffeur's license?"

"I have none," confessed the ardor-dampened joy-rider.

Twenty-five dollars more.

Waung Kyung-sung entered a foodshop. He wasn't very hungry but he thought he might indulge in two coppers worth of meat.

The butcher wrapped the parcel and presented it to his customer.

But Waung was not so easily satisfied. He opend the paper and sniffed, first suspiciously and then with conviction.

Then he threw the meat on the floor and hit the butcher on the head with an earthenware bowl.

The butcher didn't like Waung's attitude or actions and so he called a policeman.

The court decided that two cents worth of meat, whether good or bad, plus a knock on the head with a bowl is worth $10 to the Settlement.

Perforce, Waung agreed with the court.

¶ Every man should consider himself fortunate who has a wife or mother who helps him to save money.

IMPROVEMENTS TO LYCEUM INCLUDE HEATING SYSTEM

Amateur Dramatic Club To Make Alterations For Comfort Of Theatergoers

The public of Shanghai, especially those who frequently attend the Lyceum Theater during the winter season, will be interested to learn that the Shanghai A.D.C. is making arrangements for the installation of a heating system in the theater which should do much to reduce complaints concerning the temperature of it during the most important, theatrically speaking, months of the year.

The scheme for heating comprises the installation of a system of vapor steam heating, with radiators situated in every part of the building, auditorium, dressing rooms, entrances, foyer, bar, stage and in all other quarters of the theater. By this means it is hoped to make the theater cosier than it is at present and at the same time to maintain a control over the temperature which should make the theater one of the best places to be in for playgoers during the cold weather. The scheme embraces an attempt the prevent the heat leakage through the stage and for this those who occupy the stalls will probably be more than a little grateful. It has been noticed, especially when the wind is in an unfavorable direction that as soon as the curtain goes up a draught of cold air comes through into the auditorium greatly to the discomfort of those in the immediate front of the stalls.

By using a series of six radiators, others in the dressing rooms and on the outside landings, it is planned to maintain a temperature at the back of the curtain equal to that in the rest of the house.

THE GENERAL SCHEME

The scheme for general heating starts right in the entrance to the theater where in the hall and on the stairs leading to the dress circle radiators will be installed. The staircases to the gallery, etc. will be similarly treated so that it may safely be said that no air will enter the auditorium which has not had its temperature raised somewhat. In the auditorium itself six large radiators around the stalls and pit will be sufficient to secure an equal warmth.

The foyer and the public bar on the dress circle floor will also be adequately warmed. Including those installed in the manager's quarters, wardrobe room, etc. the building will be supplied with nearly 50 radiators all supplied from boilers situated underneath the stage.

The ventilating system will be designed so as to supply fresh air to any part of the building, tempered by a tempering heater and passed through an air washer where it will be thoroughly washed and purified and then by means of suction it will be introduced into the auditorium and passing through that will be taken away by a suction duct situated where the ventilation grating is now placed in the top of the dome. It is hoped by this means to maintain a steady supply of fresh air for the audiences and continually to change it insuring a gentle current of good pure air on lines followed in all the best theaters in Europe.

INSTALL COOLING SYSTEM

The cooling system, which it is also planned to install, will make it possible to continue the theatrical season all the year round regardless of the summer heat outside, and, generally speaking the temperature inside the building will be about 15 degrees lower than that prevailing outside. Here again the air will be taken into the building through one opening, passed through a washer and cooling chamber and then pumped at an even rate into the auditorium.

The whole scheme will probably take a year or two to bring to completion, but when it is finished the theater will be on a level with many a European theater of the same size. For the immediate future the heating system will engage the attentions of the club and it is hoped that by November next patrons of the theater will be able to watch plays during the season in absolute comfort.

The cooling system has not been introduced into any theater in the Far East as yet, but in view of the large number of touring companies now visiting Shanghai it is clear that the three summer months will in a very short while cease to be regarded as a theatrical close season. There is no reason why, with all the assistances science now gives in these directions, the theater should not be as comfortable in the summer as it is hoped to make it in the winter, added to which the possibility of enjoying a good play in the dog days, when entertainment hangs fire by reason of the heat, should serve to attract even more companies to Shanghai than come at present.

British Aircraft Deal Declared Of Great Magnitude

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 23.—In the course of a speech in London today, the Marquis of Londonderry, Under-Secretary for Air, emphasised the magnitude of the recently concluded aircraft deal for the purchase from the Disposals Board by a syndicate of aeroplane manufacturers of all the surplus aircraft material in Great Britain for £100,000,000.

He said that the deal involved the sale of 10,000 aeroplanes, 30,000 engines and enormous quantities of equipment, all products of the British aeroplane industry.

It was announced that accessories were finding a very ready sale in view of the present shortage. The syndicate, the Under-Secretary concluded, was endeavoring to remove the stigma that British commerce was slow-moving.

New C.P.O.S. Liner Empress Of France Has War Record

The latest addition to the great fleet of C.P.O.S. steamships which ply between Canada and practically all the important ports of call in the world is the Empress of France, before the war popularly known as the Alsatian and one of the ocean greyhounds between Canada and Liverpool. The vessel has been reconditioned since the war ceased and recently completed her maiden trip to Quebec under her new name. The Empress of France has a length of 600 ft.; beam 72 ft.; depth (to D. deck) 54 ft. 6 in.; and a tonnage of 18,000 gross. A striking peculiarity is the cruiser's stern, which imparts a warlike appearance to the vessel. Her war record is one to be proud of.

BEARS CALL TO WAR

The Empress of France as the s.s. Alsatian was requisitioned for war purposes under Royal Proclamation immediately on her arrival at the port of Liverpool, midnight on August 6, 1914. After completion of discharge, the entire removal of all passenger accommodation and other woodwork, she was armed with 8-6 in. guns, commissioned and manned by a naval crew under the command of Captain V. Phillimore, D.S.O., and was attached to the 10th Cruiser Squadron on northern patrol duty, sailing from Liverpool on August 15, at which port she has been based during the entire period of her commission.

From August to December, 1914, she remained as above stated, but in December she was made flagship of the squadron to which she was attached, and Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley R. S. De Chair, K.C.B., M.V.O., hoisted his flag, which flew up to March, 1916, when he was succeeded by Admiral Sir Reginald G. Tupper, K.C.B., C.V.O., who was succeeded in November, 1918, by Rear-Admiral C. W. Keighley Peach, under whose flag she terminated her commission as an armed cruiser.

AS PROTECTOR TO CONVOY

The squadron to which she was attached consisted of 24 vessels, the majority of which were armed mercantile cruisers. The duties of the squadron consisted of the stopping of vessels, boarding them and examining their papers, and if on examination they proved to be at all of a suspicious nature, a naval officer was placed in charge and they were taken into a United Kingdom port for closer examination. This similarly applied to any members of the passengers or crew, as each and everyone had to give a satisfactory explanation as to his nationality and business. Available records show that in all the squadron intercepted some 16,000 vessels, but it is impossible to say how many of these proved to be engaged in work hostile to the Allies' interests.

In the early part of 1918, circumstances permitted of the 10th Cruiser Squadron being considerably reduced in numbers, and vessels so engaged being allocated to convoy protection duty, the Alsatian figuring among the number and being stationed on the North Atlantic route in such capacity. While so engaged she escorted nine convoys of about 20 vessels each, carrying an estimated number of troops per convoy of 30,000, principally Americans.

TROOPS AND CARGO

While engaged on convoy escort duties the Alsatian also carried troops and cargo, the number of former per voyage being about 600, and the weight of cargo per voyage between 2,000 and 3,000 tons. She made her last voyage on Government service in November, 1918, sailing from Liverpool on the 14th, and redocked at that port on December 11, 1918, having steamed a total distance on Government service of 266,741 miles and consumed 170,571 tons of coal.

On January 17, 1919, she left for Glasgow having been placed in the hands of her builders, Messrs. Beardmore and Co., by the Admiralty for reconditioning, being redelivered to the C.P.O.S. at the Port of Liverpool on Thursday, September 25, and sailing for Quebec on Friday, September 26.

E. M. HERR, HEAD OF WESTINGHOUSE COMPANIES, HERE

Swift Industrial Expansion Apparent In China, Says Visitor

China is developing swiftly along industrial and other lines in the opinion of Mr. E. M. Herr of Pittsburg, President of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company and allied companies, who is in Shanghai with Mrs. Herr on a pleasure trip through the Orient. Mr. and Mrs. Herr arrived Sunday on the Empress of Japan and will go on to Peking today. They will return to the United States by way of Japan after a trip through Korea.

As evidence of the industrial expansion in China Mr. Herr said the company is shipping to China many electric turbines for the development of light and power and large quantities of other electric equipment designed for use in industrial plants also are being exported from America.

Post-war conditions, he said, had produced such a variety of problems that manufacturers in America, particularly those producing for world markets, were finding themselves just now facing a situation wholly new to them. To deal adequately with coming developments, he said, the Westinghouse interests about a year ago had organised a new company to care for export business. This is the Westinghouse International Export Company of New York, whose president, Mr. L. A. Osborne, recently paid a visit to Shanghai. The business of this company, Mr. Herr said, had been increasing steadily in the Orient.

No immediate extensions in China are being planned by Westinghouse interests, Mr. Herr said. He mentioned the program of enlargement of the Shanghai Municipal electrical plant and the development of tram car service in cities in China as things in which his company is interested and he intimated that he may confer with officials of the Chinese government in Peking in connection with extensions of Chinese railways.

"But we are here chiefly on a pleasure trip," he added. "It is my first trip to China and I am using the opportunity to study conditions."

the control of the Provincial Government.

(7). Russian institutions interested in questions concerning warehouses and prices of commodities, food-stuffs, and fuel, shall in no way be interfered with by the Japanese troops.

(8). Special facilities shall be given for the storage of arms and ammunition in transit.

NO CONFISCATION OF RUSS WAR MATERIAL

(9). War materials temporarily seized shall not be confiscated, utilised or destroyed by the Japanese troops.

(10). The Japanese shall recognise that the Russian warships now at Vladivostok do not constitute a menace to the Japanese troops while for the Provisional Government they are indispensable for the protection and maintenance of industry and communications.

At the conference, held on April 21, the Russians conceded practically all the Japanese terms proposed on April 19. The minor points were to be discussed on April 22.

Referring to clause 2 of the Russian counter-proposals, the Japanese delegates pointed out that the Japanese command had made no declaration with regard to withdrawal from Habarovsk to which place the Russians recognised the Japanese claims.

The Russian delegates apologised for the premature publication of the Japanese terms by the Bolsheviks and proposed that they should give publicity to the future development of the negotiations to which proposal the Japanese delegates agreed.

The aeroplane was pierced in many places by bullets and the oil tank riddled. Their captors took all their belongings.

Subsequently a patrol of cavalry rescued the two airmen and also recovered the aeroplane which the Turks and Arabs had stolen.

The machine was repaired and Captain Ranza was enabled to continue his flight.

BRITAIN EXTENDS PROFITEERING ACT SCOPE TILL 1921

Board Of Trade Empowered To Check On Firms—Reasonable Profit Is Defined

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 23.—A bill, introduced into the House of Commons today, to amend and extend the duration of the profiteering act, provides that the Board of Trade may approve a scheme, submitted by a substantial proportion of persons engaged in the production and distribution of articles, for the limitation of profit at any stage.

It is proposed to extend the act to include the hiring as well as the sale of articles and also to any process of manufacture or repairing, cleaning or washing.

A reasonable profit is defined as the rate of net profit obtaining before the war with respect to the same article.

Board of Trade officials will be empowered to carry out inquiries and to inspect books and documents with respect to allegations of profiteering. The maximum penalty for refusal to give information or for giving false information will be £50 and or three months imprisonment.

The findings of the tribunals on investigation may be published. A penalty is provided for cases where the person against whom complaint has been made, unreasonably refuses to sell the complainant articles previously supplied to him. The act is extended until May 12, 1921.

MORE MAIL DUE FROM U.S. SOON

Venezuela To Arrive Friday, Nile Saturday—Empress Boat Goes May 8

The next incoming mail from America will arrive on the Pacific Mail liner Venezuela, due here from San Francisco by way of Honolulu and Japan ports Friday, and following the Venezuela the China Mail liner Nile is due to arrive from San Francisco via Honolulu on Saturday. The Kashima Maru is due here from Seattle May 6 and following this vessel the steamer China of the China Mail with a heavy shipment of mail from San Francisco should arrive about May 10.

A cable to the American Post Office received yesterday was to the effect that the China had sailed from San Francisco with 825 bags of mail for the American Post Office here.

The next boat carrying mails to depart from Shanghai will be the Korea Maru bound for San Francisco by way of Honolulu, but the bulk of American mail now being received at the American Post Office will be held for the Empress of Russia of the Canadian Pacific Ocean Services sailing from Shanghai May 8. Though it leaves Shanghai two days after the other vessel, the Empress of Russia is due to arrive at Vancouver, B. C. May 24, six days ahead of the arrival of the Korea Maru at San Francisco. All mail that is specifically marked to go on the Korea Maru will be despatched on that vessel.

A deluge of mail that arrived Sunday at the American Post Office was within striking distance of the office record of 1,998 bags in one day, reached in February of 1917. In all 1,724 bags of mail came in Sunday from three vessels, the Empress of Russia, which sailed this morning for Manila, and the freighters, Justin, 25 days out from Seattle, and the Delight, 39 days out from Seattle, the latter with parcel mail only.

'Good Gracious Annabelle'

"Good Gracious Annabelle," or should I say good gracious Miss Marie Tempest! But, there the little lady is a comedienne and her mission in life is to cheer us up and to make us laugh. She does that with every gesture and every intonation of the voice. I suppose that Clare Kummer wrote 'Good Gracious Annabelle' just to give cause for laughter. It would be a joke to look for a plot of any kind in the piece. We all laughed heartily from the 'ring up' to the 'final fall' and that is all there is to it.

Miss Tempest as usual kept the house in the best of humor. She had a character to portray which cannot be said to rank with 'Kitty' or a dozen others that I have seen her play. However she is such a clever actress that she can make the most trifling lines amusing.

Graham Browne had to be a 'George Wimbledon.' This gentleman made his first appearance and gave us very evident proof that he had had a very nasty fall off the water wagon. As the play proceeded it was even more evident that he would never get back on the cart, and in fact made no attempt to do so. Graham Browne was extremely funny in the part and caused lots of smiles and sometimes roars, but as a characterisation the player would not call it one of his masterpieces. The stuff given to the players was not nearly good enough for their talents.

Kyrle Sylvaney as 'John Rawson' was the most convincing of all the players in a large cast. He had a well drawn picture to paint, and he was very sure with all his materials. It is the biggest part we have seen him in and he was splendid.

The company called upon some of the leading amateurs to help them out and right well did they fit in with their professional friends. Duncan J. Donne had the biggest of these parts. He has already proved his worth as an excellent actor and had it been anyone else I should have said the part of 'Harry Murchison' was well played. But it was not good enough for Donne. He has done things infinitely better. He looked nice and it was evident that he made an appeal. Laurie Burman did well with a small sketch, and Harold Aiers as the page was good, but of the amateurs the palm undoubtedly goes to Lawrie Smith. He had not a great deal to do as the hotel clerk but his manner and the delivery of his lines left nothing to be desired.

Messrs. Taylor, Roger Barry, Millard and Ashton Jarry; also Miss Komp, Miss Dorothy Hamilton and Miss Doris Graham all filled in the bits that made an enjoyable evening.

"Good Gracious Annabelle" will be repeated this evening and it is certainly a great laughter maker.

Paper Shop Owner Sent To Hangchow For Trial As Embezzler

Complicity in an embezzlement of $17,000 from a Hangchow Chinese firm was charged against a Shanghai merchant in a case that came before the Mixed Court yesterday, Kyen Tsi-ching, proprietor of a paper shop in Shanghai for five years according to his lawyer, Mr. J. B. Davies, is the defendant in the case and is charged with two other men. He was ordered turned over to the authorities at Hangchow.

British Assessor Blackburn and Magistrate Li heard the case.

Mr. Davies protested that his client should be tried here as a resident of Shanghai. His motion to that effect was overruled.

Detective Inspector J. Cruickshank was the principal witness for the local police. He said his men were informed by the Chekiang province authorities that the money had been embezzled and that defendant had received $5,000. He said Kyen admitted receiving the money but asserted he had turned the money over to another man.

Silver Demands Of India Steady Market

(Reuter's Service)

London, April 22.—Silver was steady this week due to the Indian Bazaars' demand for immediate shipment. China was sold forward but the steadiness of spot later induced the veering of orders.

The undertone of the market was poor under the influence of the prospect of large production and the abundance of melted coin from the continent and demand was confined to the East.

Baseball Practice Today

Baseball practice today!

Such is the edict issued last night by "Billy" Pitt, temporary captain of the Shanghai Amateur Baseball Club.

And now, Mr. Weather Man, it's up to you.

There was sort of an undersized gathering of the clan yesterday afternoon at the Race Course and as a result a few sore arms are in evidence today. But old men like Tinkham took no chances—and Bradley wanted to hit all the time.

Bills, Bradley, Tinkham, Bobby Gill, Crow, Heid and other old timers answered the roll call for the first practice yesterday. Among the new comers was Gus Reis, of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, who recently came out from San Francisco to join the local office.

Smith, Wilhoit, Hopkins, last year's southpaw left fielder; French, Tommy Holman, the Carlton jazz drummer; Lilie, a B.A.T. man; Charlie Hopkins, who played with the Canadian Army team in France; Shanahan, Daniel Boone and others are expected to report today.

TOKIO ENTERTAINS VANDERLIP PARTY

Representative U. S. Financiers Guests At Banquet At The Peers' Club

Tokio, April 25.—Mr. Frank A. Vanderlip and the party of representative American financiers, who are visiting Japan, were entertained at a banquet at the Peers Club this evening.

Baron Shibusawa, the President of the "American Guests' Welcome Association," in the course of a speech of welcome, said: "We have never before had a party composed of so many prominent gentlemen of America to visit Japan. We all know what war means after the terrible experience of the great war. Should there be any obstacle in the way of perfect understanding between America and Japan, are we not prepared to dispose of it in such a manner that our nations shall continue to enjoy their historic friendship? This thought leads me to say that your visit is full of significance. I firmly believe that it will result in some concrete contribution to the welfare of mankind."

MR. VANDERLIP REPLIES

Mr. Vanderlip, replying on behalf of the party, said that they highly appreciated the welcome accorded them. He added that he hoped "to see America emerge from her mental feudalism and become a nation of world-wide understanding and sympathy, discarding prejudice and understanding the problems which other peoples have to face."

"It is important" he declared "that each country should be a good neighbor to other countries and be sympathetic with respect to the particular problems which other countries are facing.

"We come to bring words of greeting from the great multitude of our fellow-countrymen who have a genuine friendly feeling for Japan."

The program which has been arranged for the entertainment of the American financiers during their stay by Mr. Hara, the Premier; Marquis Okuma and many other prominent personages, includes banquets, dinners, luncheons, sight-seeing and typical Japanese entertainments. The party will leave again for America on May 15.

DOVER PATROL TO BE MEMORIALISED IN N. Y. HARBOR

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, April 21.—Major John Evelyn Leslie Wrench, organiser of the Overseas Club, today presented Mr. Daniels, Secretary of the Navy, with a cheque for £6,000 for the erection of a memorial to the joint maintenance of the Dover patrol during the war by the British and United States Navies.

Major Wrench predicted that whatever the ultimate size of the respective navies, the flags of both nations would "float in the breezes of the seven seas for all time in the friendliest association."

Mr. Daniels replied, expressing high appreciation of the generous sentiments which inspired the memorial. He said: "The friendship between Great Britain and America, strengthened in the stress of mutual co-operation and sacrifices during the war, must be cemented in devotion to the world peace."

The fund will be used for the erection of a monolith at the entrance to New York Harbor.

A publication of considerable value that has just been issued by the Whangpoo Conservancy Board in connection with the survey of the port that it is engaged upon is a detailed map of the Whangpoo estuary and adjacent territory.

The map, which is the result of a survey by Mr. Y. Utne, is exceptionally complete. It is drawn to a scale of one inch to a thousand feet and is printed in black on heavy white book paper. Its dimensions are 40½ by 37½ inches and in addition to indicating all the thoroughfares and important areas that abut on the waterfront, principal buildings and all godowns, warehouses and piers are given by name and the depths of the river in separate areas also are stated.

DATE OF PARADE NOT YET FIXED

S.V.C. Turns Out For Church Parade In Bad Weather

Details for the ceremonial parade to be given this week by the S.V.C. and inspection of the organisation by Lieut. Col. J. R. Wyndham have not yet been decided on, it was announced yesterday but it is expected that they will take place on Thursday afternoon at the Polo Grounds, weather permitting. It has been practically decided that the review and inspection cannot take place on Wednesday because of the Municipal Council meeting on that day.

Inclement weather interfered with but did not prevent the church parade on Sunday. The men of the S.V.C. fell in on The Bund at 10 o'clock in the morning and went to the various houses of worship with which they are affiliated. There was a good turnout.

That the talents of the military heroes have come from God and that the wisdom of Confucius was from the same source was the declaration of Rev. P. N. Tsu, who conducted the services for the Chinese Company, which turned out 110 strong, to attend the meeting of the Y.M.C.A. in Martyrs' Memorial Hall. The service was arranged especially by the Church of Our Savior and the Association. The minister urged that men should unite in the worship of the one true God.

The various units of the S. V. C. were mobilised at their stations last evening for preliminary inspection by Lieut. Col. Wyndham.

JAPAN UNDERGOES RE-ACTION AFTER WAR PROSPERITY

Country's Financial Resources Thought Sufficient To Avert A Panic

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Tokio, April 24.—It is authoritatively stated that early in April the Masuda bill broking bank was in difficulties but was assisted by its confreres.

The stock exchanges at Tokio and Osaka are still closed owing to the heavy fall in quotations resulting from the lower prices of commodities.

It is believed that a natural reaction from the war prosperity is to be expected throughout the country. Unscrupulous traders are beset with difficulties but up to the present there have been no important failures.

A few small banks have closed down temporarily but there is no disturbance of the money market. Though the stock exchanges are not open, transactions in rice, cotton yarn and raw silk, have re-opened. It is believed that the recent manifestations of depression do not indicate a panic.

On the other hand Japan has entered on the transition inevitably following times of abnormal economic activity. It is confidently hoped that Japan's financial resources which have much increased during the last few years will be sufficient to tide over the situation.

(Reuter's Service)

Washington, April 22.—Admiral Benson, Chief of the United States Naval Operations, after conferring with Herr Cuno and the other directors of the Hamburg-Amerika Line, denied that their visit was connected with the proposed taking over of the German trade routes by American companies in co-operation with the Hamburg-America Line. He added that the matter was in the hands of private companies.

Washington, April 22.—A Sub-Committee of the Senate Commerce Committee has submitted a complete substitute measure for the House of Representatives measure with regard to the sale of ships belonging to the wartime American Merchantile Marine but has retained the provision demanding the sale of the ships as soon as practicable.

Far Eastern Insurance Co. Meeting

The fourth ordinary general meeting of shareholders of the Far Eastern Insurance Company Ltd. took place yesterday afternoon at the head office, Yangtsze Insurance Building, when a a dividend of 6 per cent was declared for the year 1919.

Mr. Edward I. Ezra occupied the chair and he was supported by the directors, Messrs. H. E. Arnold, E. T. Byrne, J. Harold Dollar, H. M. Tibbey and Count L. Jezierskf. Mr. W. S. Jackson, the general manager, attended in the capacity of secretary.

The total number of shares represented was 24,584.

The secretary having read the notice convening the meeting and the auditor's report, the chairman said:

Gentlemen: I would refer you to the report and accounts to December, 31, 1919, showing the second complete year's work of the Company, a copy of which you will find on your seats and as a copy of same was forwarded to each shareholder several days ago I will, with your approval, take them as read.

I would first draw your attention to working account, 1918, which shows a balance at credit of Tls. 158,268.74 and after allowing for all estimated pending claims on this account, the result should show a satisfactory profit when the working account of 1918 is finally closed.

BUSINESS EXPANDING

With reference to working account for the 12 months ending December 31, 1919, you will no doubt notice a satisfactory increase in the amount of premia earned, namely Tls. 560,321.42 as compared with Tls. 289,986.28 during 1918. We have again shown the amount of reinsurance premia on the other side of the account in order that you may see that we have carried on our policy of proceeding with caution and running small limits and have, in consequence, had to expend this large sum in reinsuring. Now, however, that the business is increasing and extending, we shall be in a position to increase our limits somewhat.

The balance at credit of this account, namely Tls. 209,716.13, would have been very much more substantial but for the fact that we have charged working account 1919 with the depreciation in the market value of local investments and loss in exchange, amounting to Tls. 148,774.15 but this depreciation and loss in exchange, are, of course, really only book entries, and I hope at the end of this year there will be an appreciation in the market value of our local investments, instead of depreciation.

SIX PERCENT DIVIDEND

Your directors were inclined to carry forward the whole of the balance standing at the credit of working account 1919, but considering the large sum earned for interest and dividends on the Company's Investments, namely, Tls. 57,229.43 during the last year, and also the fact that shareholders who invested their money in this company's investments, namely, Tls. entitled to receive a portion of this interest income, they decided to declare a dividend of 6 percent out of interest earned, and this I trust will meet with your entire approval.

In the balance sheet there is very little for me to comment upon. You will notice that the assets total the satisfactory sum of Tls. 1,087,984.87 with the exception of the value of our permanent gold investments, which with the approval of our auditors have been again valued at the taels cost price, sterling exchange has been taken at 7s. 10d and the relative value between gold dollars and Taels at 149, these being the T. T. rates on December 31, 1919 and the consequent loss in exchange, amounting to Tls. 126,418.15 has been debited to working account 1919.

COMPETITION IS KEEN

Competition for both Fire and Marine Insurance has been very rife of late, largely in consequence of the slackness of business generally caused by the high rate of exchange ruling at the present time, but in spite of this competition I feel confident that our Far Eastern Company will be able to hold its own.

"We are going ahead and extending our fields of operation carefully and gradually. I would remind shareholders that the Far Eastern is a local Company with a large proportion of its shares held in China, and as every shareholders has something to insure, either his household effects, his residence, his private effects when traveling, or his motor car, I hope he will not overlook the Far Eastern when he places his insurances, as small contributors often become large contributors.

"I can assure you that however small the business a shareholder may bring to this office, he will receive the same attention and consideration as one bringing a risk for many thousands of taels. By bringing your own business, and that of your friends, to the Company in which you are a shareholder, you will be helping to build up and strengthen it.

I will now propose the first resolution, namely, that the report of the directors and statement of accounts for the 12 months ending December 31, 1919, as presented, be accepted and passed. This resolution is seconded by Mr. H. E. Arnold, but before putting it to the meeting, I shall be pleased to answer any questions shareholders may wish to ask.

No questions being asked, the following resolutions were adopted unanimously:

Proposed by Edward I. Ezra seconded by H. E. Arnold.

That the report of the directors and statement of accounts for the 12 months ended December 31, 1919, as presented, be accepted and passed.

Proposed by Edward I. Ezra, seconded by H. E. Arnold.

That a dividend at the rate of six percent, being one tael and 20 cents per share, on the paid-up capital of the company, be declared payable on and after April 27, 1920, at the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation or the Russo-Asiatic Bank, Shanghai, to shareholders of record on the April 19, 1920.

Proposed by J. Prentice, seconded by H. J. Clark.

That Messrs. Edward I Ezra, H. E. Arnold, E. T. Byrne, J. Harold Dollar, V. Meyer, H. M. Tibbey and Count L. Jezierski be re-elected directors to serve until the next ordinary general meeting of shareholders.

Proposed by W. J. N. Dyer, seconded by T. Orton.

That Messrs. G. H. and N. Thomson be re-elected auditors to serve until the next ordinary general meeting of shareholders and that their remuneration be taels 300 per annum.

KINGMAN & BROS.
How to Preserve the Teeth

In order to keep the teeth in a good condition scientific precaution must be taken. Through negligence, decay and numerous other affections such as tooth-ache, dental periostitis osteo-periostitis, necrosis of the jaw, etc., may arise. During the process of ingestion, there are settled on the teeth, some deposits of mineral and organic matters, called tartar, which possesses a morbid power of pressing the gum. As an inevitable result of the presence of this tartar, the teeth will become elongated and movable and will, by degrees, absorb away the enamel, leading ultimately to the decay and degeneration of the teeth. The tartar is so hard and resistant to the process of brushing that it cannot be scraped off except with dental instruments specially devised for that purpose.

Dr. KINGMAN offers to the public his service for preserving their teeth at an annual subscription Fee of $10.00 per head to be paid in advance.

The work to be done by Dr. KINGMAN to the subscribers consists in:—
(1) Cleaning of the teeth quarterly
(2) Filing with gold platinum alloy only, when the teeth present holes.
(3) Inspecting the teeth at any time at the desire of the subscribers.

Gen. Lu Breaks Loose

WE commend to the attention of the Tuchuns, who by their military oppression and financial corruption, are fast crushing out the little life that remains in China, the circular telegram issued by the Tuchun of Chekiang Province, which we published in Sunday's CHINA PRESS.

Gen. Lu Yung-hsiang is a member of the Tuchunate. Before that he was Defense Commissioner at Shanghai. He knows all about the Tuchuns and their system; and he declares that they and their system must go. Either that or China must go. Which is it to be?

"I know that the salvation of our country lies in the sacrifice of individual privileges and interests. The abolition of the Tuchun system forms the most important item of the reform program of the day," says Gen. Lu. "In the program for the abolition of the Tuchun system, please start with me. I am an outspoken man and not accustomed to camouflage my statements with others. I am sure you will not consider this message as an effort to seek notoriety. It is really a spontaneous expression made from the bottom of my heart. I am sure you are no less patriotic than I am and will sympathise with me in my suggestions for the salvation of the country."

Gen. Lu thus invites the oppressors of the country to make a start in the right direction by dismissing him. He puts his own head on the block first. But he wants the other tuchuns to follow him to the block; not only the Northern tuchuns but the Southern—all of them. Then there will be a chance for the restoration of national unity. And probably not otherwise, as he sees it, for his telegram accuses both sides of insincerity and intrigue, of not really being desirous of peace. He says: "We are very much astonished with the movement for internal peace .... The peace makers of today all say that they are sincere in their efforts. But I have seen no genuine sincerity anywhere. The intriguers must be eliminated."

Again he says: "The Tuchuns usurp all the military powers of the country, hoard the national wealth, occupy the most glorious posts and play politics. We are not here to discuss whether or not they have formed a general blockade against peace and union of the country. But we are compelled to admit that the Tuchun system under a Republican form of government is not permissible."

He then points to the manner in which the Presidents of the United States and France were chosen—without military influence—and adds: "It is natural that fame should go where fame is deserved."

We congratulate Gen. Lu on thus taking the bit in his teeth. He is the first of the Tuchuns to see the light. We don't know what would happen if the tuchuns should resign in a body and go into retirement. Some machinery would have to be set up in advance to take care of the army. But of the truth of Gen. Lu's indictment there can be no doubt. The present system is one of unalloyed evil. It must go. Militarism in China, so-called, has failed both North and South. There can be no peace in China while these warring generals prevail.

But what system is to succeed the one now under fire? And what men are to succeed the Tuchuns in command of the Chinese army? Right here we reach another historical pause.

Yeats, Poet-Playwright, Believes Science Will Soon Establish That Soul Survives After Physical Death

BY ELIZABETH ESKEY
(New York World)

THE world today is standing, as it appears to me, just at the edge of a great religious revival, such awakening as there has not been since the Rennaissance in the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries began the movement toward scepticism. I believe that within twenty or thirty years the survival of the soul after the death of the physical body will be not a principle accepted by faith but a fact established by science."

William Butler Yeats spoke this conviction earnestly as he talked with me the other day in the apartment at the Hotel Algonquin which he and Mrs. Yeats make their New York headquarters between lecture tours to various parts of the country. The Irish poet and playwright, one of that group of Irish writers, most of them mystics, who twenty-five years ago inaugurated the revival of Celtic literature which became identified on the literary side with the Irish national movement, consented to be interviewed on his views on immortality only on condition that "you do not ask me to discuss whether communications from the spirit world are juggiery or not juggiery.

"It is absurd to ask whether trained men of science in all parts of the world who are making these psychic investigations are the wholesale victims of fraud," he said with some warmth. "If the question is one of juggiery or not, these trained experimenters can give more valuable testimony than any which I might make. One can read of the experiments with table levitation made by Prof. Crawford of Belfast. In the French Annals of Psychic Science can be seen photographs of materialisation made by Dr. Ochorowitz of Warsaw in his experiments to prove that an image in the mind can affect a photographic plate. Prof. Richet of Paris has recorded sittings with the medium whom he called 'Madame X,' who answered his questions in Greek, a language of which she was totally ignorant. I could multiply names almost indefinitely, for this is a subject that I have been studying for twenty years, and I myself did not become convinced until my unspoken mental questions were answered in Greek and Latin by a writing medium who knew neither.

"However, that is not a phase of the question on which my testimony is valuable, though there is one thing I should like you to say for me in connection with the discussion here in New York. If Mr. Rinn, who offered a wager to the Society for Psychic Research, really wishes to perform a service to science in this most difficult field of investigation, let him first withdraw his $5,000. Scientific discussion must be, above all things, dispassionate, and no man of science who has any dignity would allow himself to be drawn into an investigation upon with a wager hangs."

His tone changed and he smiled.

"But if you will grant me," he said, "the sort of credence that you would give to the play of Hamlet; if you will accept for the moment without question the spiritist hypothesis, then I can discuss with you philosophically some of the problems of immortality."

The author of "Cathleen ni Hoolihan" and "The Land of Hearts Desire" sat up energetically on his knees on the edge of his bed as he prepared to enter into the discussion. He had attempted to talk resting against the pillows, for, as Mrs. Yeats explained, he had been taxed with a long day of hard work.

"It is not one's tongue that gets tired," said the poet plaintively from the pillows. "It's the small of one's back." But he sat up immediately on his knees and soon was traveling restlessly to the foot of the bed, absorbed in his problem of making clear to a sceptical public representation by me ideas which were so luminously self-evident to him.

"I believe in the survival of the spirit after death," he began, 'but I think the spiritual existence is so different from life here under conditions of time and space that we cannot comprehend it with our mortal minds except through symbol. That is not a new theory. It is the belief of all the mystics and of all the religious philosophers. St. Thomas, for instance, said that after death a man enters into the eternal possession of himself in one single moment.'

"The theory of the nature of a 'control' elaborated by Mrs. Sidgwick in her study of the mediumship of Mrs. Piper is in a general way my own belief. The control which appears as a spirit to the medium is not a spirit but a dreaming state of secondary personality induced by the spirit as a means of communication. This mediatorial dream can be influenced either by the spirit or by the sitter. It is very sensitive to suggestion from this side, and may answer falsehoods and absurdities in response to questions.

"Therefore, I think a sharp distinction must be drawn between messages which come voluntarily from the other side—that is, between those messages in which the initial impulse comes from the spirit—and messages received in answer to questions from this side. Messages from the other side generally relate to matters of this world, and are true. The message received by Sir Oliver Lodge telling of a photograph of his son which the family did not know existed, or the other story related by him in a recent lecture concerning some letters and a lock of hair which Lady Lodge found in the kit of a deceased soldier and destroyed, according to the request of the messages, are examples of the true communications of which I speak and are valuable evidence for survival.

"But the moral kindergarten which Sir Oliver deduces as the state of the spirit world, descriptions of the summer land and the spheres of existence, I regard as a travesty on the spiritual life. Symbols and correspondences have been mistaken for actualities both by the mediums and the dreaming controls themselves, and the false theories, once established, have been communicated from medium to sitter and sitter to medium again through a long line by mental suggestion.

"Of course many investigators do not accept the spiritist theory. Neither Ochorowitz nor Richet accepts it. In Europe the general tendency appears to be toward the belief that a transcendental capacity possessed by the medium in the trance state is responsible for all the phenomena of the supernatural, for the spirit lights which some of the company see and others do not during a sitting, for materialisations, messages, etc. This transcendental capacity—this power and this knowledge—which enables mediums to convey messages in tongues they do not know, and to describe places they have never seen, has been, I think, amply established. But an experience of a friend of mine who went with a medium to dig treasure is an example of the difficult way in which truth and falsehood are commingled in trance messages. It is, indeed, this commingling that makes many investigators doubt the finality of such evidence for survival as Sir Oliver Lodge's photographs.

"The medium who accompanied my friend was as keen as he about the adventure. They had received in trance messages minute descriptions of the topography of a country through which the medium had never traveled. They made a large part of the trip in a motor car, passing trees and houses as described. All was minutely exact until they came to within a few feet of the treasure—and the treasure was not there.

"In relating experiments of this kind, of course, one difficulty that one constantly encounters is that it is impossible to establish scientifically the facts of the medium's character as one knows them.

"The fact that a medium in a trance does reach transcendental knowledge has been, as I say, pretty well established. If this is true; if my human ego under certain conditions has a knowledge of things, for instance, that happened hundreds of years ago, or hundreds of miles away, in places which I have never visited, then that ego, supposing that its knowledge is not obtained from spirits, has a knowledge entirely independent of its senses. This argues in the individual soul a power so amazing that the soul must, as I think, have had a history before birth, and by the same reasoning will have one after death.

"When it is once established, not as a principle of faith but as a fact of science, that the individual soul does survive the body after death, there will come about a complete reversal of all our ideas as to what personality is. Deductions will be made from it in all directions. It will be impossible to consider any question of education, of politics or of economics without bringing this new fact into the reckoning. At present we all instinctively consider the work of man's hand more lasting than the man himself. Our education, our political institutions, our economics, are naturally more occupied with making the handwork more efficient. We want to make the man a good laborer or a good clerk or a good professor.

"But establish that the personality itself will outlive all its handiwork, even though that handiwork might have been the Pyramids, the main object of all our politics and all our economics will be the perfection of the personality itself.

"The great changes in the world's thought have not in the last analysis been made by evidence but by authority. More and more people will be convinced of the new knowledge, until presently one will wake up to discover that the whole world has accepted the verdict of authority and is convinced—just as the whole world now believes that the earth goes round the sun, though not one man in a million knows the grounds for his belief."

Marion Crawford's Voice

(New York Times)

In Chambers's Journal Mr. Eric S. Robertson, writing upon "Marion Crawford in Rome," arouses grateful memories in the perhaps too Victorian bosoms of many chronic readers of novels for pleasure, and of many others who have traveled in or have an especial fondness for Italy. What writer of English has known Italian character and social life so well? Indeed, he was born and died in Italy. One thinks of him in all the beauty of Sorrento, where he lived so much. One looks back with regret to his old Roman home among the orange trees and cypresses, the vanished casino of the Villa Negroni. If he lingered into Georgian times, still how can his old readers be sure that they are not melancholy survivors of a dwindling band? Once there were thousands of us who swore by James Rice and Walter Besant. How many people now read such fine novels—so at least they seemed a generation ago—as "Ready Money Mortiboy" and "The Chaplain of the Fleet"? So it may now be, or may not be, with "Saracinesca" and "Casa Braccio," "Sant' Ilario" and "Corleone."

However that may be, his stories gave a great many persons pleasure, and it is good to remember that he had a very pleasant time himself. He was educated in many countries and tongues. He saw the manners of many men and cities. He had all sorts of friends on sea and land, Roman cabmen, Greek sailors. Readers of "A Roman Singer," "Prima Donna" and so on will like to hear from Mr. Robertson of Crawford's musical experiences and friendships. If he jeered the decrepitude of the choir organ of St. Peter's, "so crazy an ancient instrument that during every service a mechanic was in attendance to patch up its bowels," he extolled, however, the singing in St. John Lateran of Padre Giovanni, his dear monk-friend with a tenor voice "soft as Summer's night and clear as a silver bell"—Padre Giovanni, who was later to perish by poison administered by a rival chorister. When Mr. Robertson met him in the Winter of 1878-79 Crawford was very musical. He had received much of the instruction meant to produce opera singers. In the American Episcopal Church, then the possessor of the only good modern organ in Rome, Crawford was the "real star" of the quartet in the large choir. He had a "tenor" voice of striking range and fearless timbre—"a sort of apostolic voice (I used to think), but one that occasionally became lost to control. This mishap was not accountable and rare, but when it did occur the effect was just that of a runaway horse in the street," Anthony Trollope's niece, then the delight and beauty of the English colony, took part in the quartet anthems. Once, coming away from practice,

> "In a dark passage between two doors I bumped up against Dr. Nevin, the clergyman, who was entering his church. At the moment we heard Crawford's voice run amok on its highest notes. Instinctively, and with youth's lack of charity, I muttered, "Alas! there's that fool Crawford letting his voice gallop away with him!" "Allow me," replied the clergyman in the dark, "to introduce you to Mr. Crawford's mother." It was indeed a tenebrous encounter. The lady, it is true, was only Crawford's stepmother, who invited me to tea; all turned out well."

Then Crawford, at that time a charming happy-go-lucky, was supposed to abandon his operatic aspirations. He started for Bombay with a Portuguese doctor. Sanskrit and other Eastern languages were to be all his study. In India, as we know, he soon parted with his Portuguese mentor. He learned the trade of newspaper man for none too sumptuous pay on the Allahabad Indian Herald. He came home and wrote "Mr. Isaacs," once so famous, swallowed eagerly by a world not yet fed too full on the occult. Naturally he knew very little of India, and his pictures of society in this book are not admired by Anglo-Indians or native Indian readers of English books.

How he came to write this book, which gave him fame and made him devote himself successfully to writing, this happy misfortune of the owner of the runaway-horse voice is known well enough to be worth repeating:

> The many admirers of Sir George Henschel's "Memories" have been told in that recent work how Crawford abandoned India in disgust and turned up, penniless, among his friends in New York. Nobody knew what now to do with this godlike, attractive, spendthrift wanderer. Sir George was engaged by Crawford's aunt, Miss [sic] Julia Ward Howe, to test the prodigal's fitness for opera. Sir George carried out the necessary test, which revealed an insurmountable defect. In one of his own novels Marion Crawford explains this defect as a discrepancy by which a man's left ear may sometimes hear things a shade higher or lower in pitch than the right ear does. Sir George Henschel says his verdict reduced Crawford to tears. Then up spoke the aspirant's uncle: "why don't you write down the little story you told me of that strange experience you had in India?" This was in January, 1882. The sensation of the following Christmas was "Mr. Isaacs."
> So he stumbled into fame and money-making, although, of course, the fattest literary royalties are poor picking compared with the earnings of a great tenor.

Teachers On Verge Of Poverty

Head Of Bryn Mawr College Tells Of Professors Who Do Their Own Cooking

By HELEN TAFT
(Acting President of Bryn Mawr College; Daughter Of ex-President Taft)

It is difficult to subject the worth of a profession such as that of teaching to the measurement of dollars and cents. A nation's civilisation can be judged by its educational standards, but neither education nor civilisation can be reduced to a strictly money value. But just as one of the leading reviewers applies the modern test of money returns to literature and asserts that the value of literature should be financial as well as artistic, so it must also be recognised that, while the value of education may be beyond computation, its cost is not, and it must be reckoned in dollars and cents.

To the members of the teaching profession the money return has always been a secondary consideration, as can be seen by the tremendous sacrifices which many teachers have made to keep on with their work. But the value which the general public—the people for whom this educational effort is made—put on the goods which they have received can be tested by the salaries which they are willing to pay to the members of the teaching profession all through the country, and, if the test were made at present, it would seem that the country as a whole places a very low valuation on its education, and, consequently, upon its civilisation.

I cannot believe that this is true. I prefer to believe that the present conditions under which the teaching profession has to work are due to ignorance on the part of the general public rather than a real lack of appreciation of the value of their services.

When the colleges all over the country, of which Bryn Mawr is but one in the vast system of education, are forced to appeal to the public in their desperate need for money in order to pay their faculties a living wage, the country cannot fail to respond if only the case is put before it vividly enough. America is proud of its educational system and American culture is a real thing and may come to be of greater importance in the world than it is possible for us to realise today. There is no need any longer to repudiate the charge that America is a nation of dollar-chasers any more than we need repudiate the charge made by the Germans after our declaration of war that America need not be feared, that Americans were a tangoing nation, too fat to get into the trenches. The war has revealed America and the ideals for which Americans stand to the world, and no American would wish that education should not be a part of those ideals.

But America has not realised the cost of education, just as she did not realise the cost of national defense until the truth was brought home to her with stunning force. She has not realised that the teachers were paying the cost of education and that it was actually out of their pockets that the money was being taken in order that the precious gifts which ought to be the birthright of every American man and woman might not be lost to the rising generation.

The teachers are under no obligation to remain in their profession and they are under no compulsion to do so. Particularly the college professor, if he has the ability and the energy to make him a successful teacher, is well equipped as a rule to succeed in other professions as well. A man cannot be a successful professor of science with ability for research and not have the opportunity open to him of going into commercial science and making a handsome income. I have known of professors to whom was offered as much as double the salary which they were receiving if they would change to commercial work. In the majority of cases they have refused because they preferred teaching and research in pure science, but it cannot be supposed that they will continue to refuse if the country so neglects its teachers as to refuse them the wages paid to artisans.

In the same way a man or woman can scarcely be equipped to teach economics as it should be taught and not be available for work along commercial or financial lines. A woman who is teaching economics and politics told me that she could go into a bank at any time even for short periods of work and make almost double what she made at teaching. I heard of a professor who accepted a position in a bank and was engaged there apparently in a very humble capacity. Some one who visited the bank asked him why he had made the change, which seemed on the whole derogatory to his dignity. His answer was illuminating: "I find that they will pay me more here while I am learning the business than I could make by teaching." And again the man who is well equipped in languages or in history or in politics, if he has initiative and adaptability, can almost invariably find a commercial opening which will afford him a comfortable income.

In spite of this the college professors have stuck to their jobs, either from sheer love of teaching or from a sense of the importance to the community of what they were doing. But that state of things will not last. Just as public school teachers are leaving the class-rooms in thousands and tens of thusands all over the country because they cannot earn enough to feed and clothe themselves and those who are dependent on them, so it will not be more than a year, perhaps not more than six months, before the colleges face the same situation as the schools, unless something is done immediately by the public to avert the catastrophe.

Only those men and women who are so lacking in ambition or so lacking in adaptability that they cannot change their mode of life will consent to remain under the present conditions in which professors have to live. Only the men and women who see no prospect of success in other professions will enter the teaching profession if the public continues to be indifferent and fails to appreciate what the cost of proper education actually is.

I am sure that if it were possible for some of those who have heard or read of the campaigns now being conducted to see the way in which the men and women who are responsible for instilling ideals and cultivating the minds of America's sons and daughters are forced to live, of the privations they endure and the petty annoyances which detract from their work, it would need no further argument to convince them that in justice, if not in self-interest, the public must pay more for its education.

There are professors at Bryn Mawr who have had to give up the small houses in which they lived and move into boarding houses, who have had to do their own cooking, to wash their own dishes, to give up educational advantages for their children, and then, when they have made every sacrifice, they have not avoided running into debt or drawing on their savings. The wives of full professors have to spend their time in tutoring or in doing odd jobs to earn money, and in addition they have all the housework on their hands and perhaps the laundry as well. I know of one man who is the second in his department, who has had to move out of fairly comfortable lodgings and go with his wife into one small room in a boarding house. I know of another man without a family who found the food at the only boarding place which he was able to afford so unpalatable that he has had to do his own makeshift cooking.

Even if men and women of ability and resource could be expected to stay at their jobs under these conditions what kind of work can be looked for from them? A man who is in college teaching must keep up with his subject. He must, if possible, do original work of his own. Otherwise scholarship will die out, and the teaching of all subjects become a mere routine. But where is the surplus energy for research and study when a man or woman is harassed daily by financial cares and is compelled by circumstances to devote every leisure moment to household duties?

I have not found that it was necessary to do much arguing, however, to prove to audiences everywhere the total inadequacy of our present scale of salaries. A full professor at Bryn Mawr receives a maximum of $3,000. This is not, on the whole, a bad salary, as salaries go in the smaller colleges. The salary of the full professor at Bryn Mawr has not been increased since 1900. The salary of the associate professor has been increased about 18 percent the only increase in our salary scale worth mentioning. But in the last four years the living costs of professors have advanced 76 percent—somewhat less than the living costs of the rest of the world because the rent item is lower, only 10 percent of the salary being spent for his home. Food has increased 34 percent and clothing 24 percent. The professor has never had sufficient income to meet necessary expenses and save anything worth while. A professor must have $5,296 today unless his standard of living is to remain lower than it was in 1900 and unless his health and efficiency are to be sacrificed. So it is not difficult to see why Bryn Mawr must obtain its $2,000,000 fund, the appeal for which was launched at the end of February.

It is startling to think that the culture of the next few generations may depend on the expenditure of a few million dollars now, at a time when the world has just ceased spending billions in a struggle to prevent civilisation from reversion to brute force. No country can afford to be parsimonious in its educational system. Such a policy would strike at the roots of its business and industrial as well as its intellectual and social life.

In all the world's history no country that stifled its arts and sciences has left anything but a brief page in history, a sort of "also-ran" classification. The United States cannot afford to lose its culture, and I feel sure that the people must realise that one of the great tests of a nation's civilisation is the pay of its teachers.

A Man Who Takes No Sides In His Books

The Remarkable Literary Qualities Of A Danish Novelist Who Won The Nobel Prize In Literature

"Scandinavia itself has not quite realised Pontoppidan's strength and originality. He takes no sides in his books, and leaves his readers without a hint as to what side he would like them to take."

Professor J. G. Robertson, writing in the Contemporary Review for March says that:

"Henrik Pontoppidan, one of the recent recipients of the Nobel prize in literature, is not entirely unknown in England, two volumes of his long novel. 'The Promised Land,' having been translated into English some ten years ago; but I cannot find that these books were regarded by us as betokening a new departure of any particular significance.

"Even Scandinavia itself—distraught as its literary opinion so often is by virtue of the very smallness of its literary public—has not, I think, quite realised Pontoppidan's strength and originality. There are, it is true, obstacles in the way of his popularity; he is depressing, often repellent in his ruthless pessimism and bitterness. But the writer who, sharing in the heritage of Dostoevsky and Tolstoi, tries to penetrate honestly into the heart of things is more likely to be unpleasant than attractive.

HIS NOTE

"He is lacking, too, in a quality which often commends to our public a writer who persists in harrowing it with disagreeable things—that of having a 'purpose'; on the contrary, no writer of our time has so completely attained that dispassionate objectivity, that 'distance' which Stendhl proclaimed indispensable to a great realistic art. Pontoppidan takes no sides in his books, and—in his three great novels, at least—he leaves his readers without a hint as to what side he would like them to take.

"The distinguished Danish literary historian, Vilhelm Andersen, has recently published a study of Pontoppidan, from which some interesting data of the writer's life and career may be gleaned. The name is an odd one, a remnant of the intellectual snobbery of the Reformation humanists; 'Pontoppidan' is a Latinisation of the Danish 'Broby,' 'bridge-town.' The family has played a considerable part in the higher life of Denmark. There was a famous Bishop, Erik Pontoppidan, a stern upholder of orthodoxy in the seventeenth century.

A BOY FROM JUTLAND

"The novelist's grandfather and father were both clergymen, and he was born at Fredericia, in Jutland, in 1857. When he was six his father was transferred to Randers; and at the Latin school of that town the boy received his education. In 1873 he came to Copenhagen, where, after a year's preparation, he entered the Polytechnic Institute with a view to a career as an engineer. But his course was never completed. On a walking-tour in Switzerland he discovered his literary talent through falling in love; and after some unsatisfying experience as a teacher he definitely resolved to make literature his profession.

"This was in 1879, and his first book, 'Stækkede Vinger' ('Clipped Wings'), came out in 1881. It is a collection of stories, the most considerable of which, 'Kirkeskuden' ('The Church Ship,' i.e., the model of a ship hung up in church), strikes one still as a quite remarkable production to have been written by a youth of twenty-two. The book was sufficiently successful for Pontoppidan to marry on the strength of it, and settle down to a very modest existence in Ostby. His first wife, from whom he was separated in 1891, came of pure peasant stock; and in these years of life Pontoppidan stood in the closest relations with the Danish peasant. This provides the keynote for the first period of his career as a writer.

HE MEETS GEORGE BRANDES

"In 1884, on a visit to Copenhagen, he made the acquaintance of George Brandes, which no doubt helped to widen his horizon; and still more important would appear to have been a meeting with Goldschmidt shortly before the death of the latter in 1887. Goldschmidt's influence on Pontoppidan's style, as on that of all his contemporaries, was no doubt considerable. From this time on Pontoppidan gradually emancipates himself from the narrow world of the peasant, a process that was completed by his second marriage in 1892. Since then he has led a busy literary life, partly in the provinces, partly in Copenhagen, where he now lives.

"The list of Pontoppidan's works is an imposing one, and may well dismay the conscientious reader who sets out to know Pontoppidan in his entirety. But most of his lesser stories group themselves conveniently round three great novels, 'Det Forjættede Land' ('The Promised Land,' 1892-95), 'Lykkeper' ('Lucky Peter,' 1898-1904)—the title is suggested by Hans Christian Anderson—and 'De Dodes Rige' ('The Kingdom of the Dead,' 1912-1916). These three works seem to me quite the most considerable contribution to the literature of the North which has been made by any single writer in the present generation. 'If one were to ask,' says Brandes, 'from what Danish writer is to be obtained the truest and most comprehensive idea of Danish ways of living, feeling, and thinking, of the outlook of representative people in Denmark in the last generation, of country as well as town, there is hardly any doubt that the answer would be: From Pontoppidan.'

A VERY LONG STORY

"'Det Forjættede Land' appeared after the author had served a long apprenticeship in short stories and sketches of peasant life. In these stories we see him gradually feeling his way through a literature of peasant stories richer than any other in Europe to an art and style of his own. This book is long wearisomely long, being in reality three books fused into one. It is a novel of the province in which Copenhagen is only a very distant speck on the horizon; a novel about peasants and pastors; and although Pontoppidan's competency to paint the Danish peasant cannot be impugned, although he knows the Danish clergy as no other, from the Copenhagen bishop to the wandering revivalist or the 'stickit minister' who becomes a 'polar bear' in his Greenland exile ('Isbjornen,' 1887), it does not relieve the book of a certain drab monotony.

"The story of 'Det Forjættede Land' is summed up by the inscription, which Pastor Petersen, the spokesman of a redeeming sanity, says should be put upon the hero's grave: 'Here lies Don Quixote's double, Emanuel Hansted by name, who was born to be an honest chaplain, but regarded himself as a prophet and a saint; who, in consequence, clothed himself in the garb of a herdsman, and held every inspiration that occurred to him to be a special call of Heaven; who bungled everything that passed through his hands, but, notwithstanding, regarded himself to the last as chosen by Providence to prepare for the coming of the Millennium.'

THE GENIUSES ARE WRONG

"'Det Forjaettede Land' is a somber book, a story of that hardest of all tragic fates, disillusionment. The moral, if one may speak of a moral in a writer so studiously a moral as Pontoppidan, is that the idealists and dreamers, the geniuses of the world are hopelessly in the wrong; that the price must inevitably be paid by all who, either by their gifts or their ambitions, dare to raise themselves above their fellows. That Pontoppidan has been influenced by Ibsen's 'Brand' is hardly to be gainsaid: Emanuel is a prose Brand, Brand in a specifically realistic milieu, a Brand in whom all the torments, to which such a nature is exposed, are relentlessly laid bare, as they could not be in five acts of trochaic verse. The pitiful sacrifice of Emanuel's child has clearly been suggested by the similar incident in Ibsen's drama.

"Disillusionment, too, is the theme of 'Lykkeper'; but 'Lykkeper' is planned on a much broader basis, and more closely knit together than its predecessor. It seems to me, indeed, easily the most powerful novel of modern Denmark, and even a landmark in the development of realistic fiction in Europe. Pontoppidan's horizon had widened; one sees it in the more varied range of the shorter stories which preceded and accompanied 'Lykkeper.' To these belong the little story 'Ornefugt' ('Eagle's Flight'), to which Herr Andersen gives typical significance, as containing the very quintessence of Pontoppidan's art. Here as in most of his work in this time, he is clearly on the search for new moral values, 'the right of passion and the great emotions.'

A COPENHAGEN STORY

"'Lykkeper' is, no doubt, an intimately personal book, how personal it would not be fair to Pontoppidan the artist to attempt to gauge. But the Latinised name of the hero, Per Sidenius, is significant; he, too, like the author himself, is a pastor's son; and he, too, comes to Copenhagen to become a engineer, and fails. Unlike its predecessor, 'Lykkeper' plays largely in the Danish capital, although Copenhagen is rather one sidedly represented by Jewish circles. Pontoppidan's realism is extraordinary in its minute detail and in its ruthlessness—that inevitable accompaniment of the art of seeing things exactly as they are.

"Although Pontoppidan holds no flattering mirror up to Danish national characteristics, his 'Lykkeper' is, none the less, a deeply national book; in spite of much that is distorted and exaggerated, it does reflect the Danish temperament, 'the passionless Danish folk with the pale eyes and the timid soul,' as it had never been reflected in such proportions before. 'Thus it had always been in Denmark. One generation after the other grew up, red-cheeked and clear-eyed, free-minded and strong; and one generation after the other has sunk into the grave, broken, bent, always vanquished. It is as if some hidden disease consumed the strength of the nation, sucked out the marrow of its best youth, and exposed the country as booty to the lust of foreign conquest.'

WHO GETS ALL HE WANTS

"'Lykkeper' is one long tragedy of the lucky mortal that gets all he wants. It is the tragedy of the will which set in far back in the nineteenth century in European literature, with Grillparzer in Austria and Leopardi in Italy. This is what constitutes Pontoppidan's pessimism; his tragedies are not tragedies of heroism spent in vain, or of superhuman renunciation; but of the failure to respond to success, to act, to seize the fleeting moment, to admit the happiness that stands waiting on the threshold. Sidenius goes out into the world with great gifts and sincere intentions; he is buffeted, crushed, jeered at, disillusioned; life grinds the spirit out of him; he does not die fighting like Emanuel Hansted—even if it be only fighting windmills—with the halo of sanctity round him, but in abnegation and spiritual paralysis."

H.C. Of L. In Germany Beats All Records

$250 For A Suit And Nearly 60 Cents For One Egg Some Items

Washington, March 6.—The increased cost of living in the United States is mild compared with the problem which confronts the average citizen in Germany, according to a confidential report received through official channels. A suit of clothes which in 1914 cost 80 marks (normally about $20) now cannot be had for less than 1,000 marks, or about $250. Shoes have increased more than 1,000 percent and men's shirts have jumped 1,166 percent. The price of eggs has risen 4,066 percent, one egg now costing 2¼ marks, almost 60 cents. Rice, cereals, butter and bacon have increased in price more than 2,000 percent.

The report shows that sugar has increased less than any other essential food product, but even it shows a jump of 316 percent. Milk has increased 320 percent. Sugar and milk, however, with bread, butter, potatoes and meat are rationed. Statistical reports from London show that, with the exception of milk and sugar, the increase in prices in Germany greatly exceeds those in Allied countries. Milk has increased 500 percent in France, against 320 percent in Germany.

It is A PAGE FROM LIFE
WHAT BONDS ARE MORE VALUABLE TO YOU? THAN THOSE OF LOVE?

Liberty Bonds; Stock Bonds; Industrial Bonds or "BONDS OF LOVE"?????

WHAT ARE YOUR BONDS OF LOVE?? Did you marry your Husband for money; for social position; for convenience; or did BONDS OF LOVE bind you to your husband???

"WHAT CEMENTS THE "BONDS OF LOVE" between married people? Is it the children; is it pure love; or is it some outside force?? SEE "BONDS OF LOVE" which is a story of Mother Love and Family Jealousy.
